MADE A TORCH OF PADDY.

Now the Chances Are He Will Carry
His Matches Elsewhere.

Nine-year-old Paddy Monaco says that the next time he plays hat on the back with the gang he isn't going to have his rear pants pocket full of matches, says the New York Sun. They play the game strenuously in a lot on Twenty-seventh street, near Tenth avenue. The game had progressed to the grab the hat and slap stage yesterday, and Paddy stood doubled up with his head pointed eastward and the other end of him directed toward the setting sun. Tommy Glynn in leaping over Paddy gave him a vigorous wallop. In a twinkling the west end of Paddy's head smoke and he let a howl out of him that could be heard for blocks. The other kids beat the flames out as best they could and saved at least the front part of Paddy's breeches. Tommy Glynn and Billy Rooney were more or less badly burned about the hands, and Paddy was more severely burned elsewhere. An ambulance was summoned from Roosevelt hospital and the surgeons fixed up the Glynn and Rooney boys and took Paddy to the hospital for more thorough treatment. Later Paddy was sent to his home at 545 West Twenty-seventh street and ate his supper off the mantelpiece.

TO THE SIXTH GENERATION.

People Who Have Lived to See Many of Their Descendants.

It is given to few men, as to M. T. Wulfschlaeger of the canton of Vaud, to celebrate the birth of a great-granddaughter, but even more remarkable experiences than this are on record, according to the Westminster Gazette. Dr. Plot in his "Natural History of Staffordshire" quotes the case of old Mary Cooper of King's Bromley, who lived to see the sixth generation of her descendants, and was in the position to say, "Rise up, daughter, and go to thy daughter, for thy daughter's granddaughter hath a daughter," while Horace Walpole lived to see seven descents in one family, the progeny of Mrs. Godfrey, mistress of James II. It is not long since the dowager duchess of Abercorn died leaving more than 200 direct descendants, at least four of whom were great-grandchildren. About the same time Mrs. Sarah Ann Woolf, of Utah, nursed her twenty-third great-grandchild, one of 303 living descendants; while it is said of a Spaniard who returned from America to his native land a few years ago that he was accompanied by 280 of his descendants, including three great-grandsons.

The Uses of Worry.

Worry of one sort and another is necessary to the complete health of the spirit; worry is as surely related to content on one side as it is to misery on the other. It is as wholesome an exercise for the spirit, and as refreshing, as the physical exercise which the man finds so necessary to his well-being. The spirit must have its peculiar gymnastics; the soul cannot afford to become stagnant; its waters, if one may say so, must be stirred occasionally if they would be kept fresh and sweet—Joel Chandler Harris in Uncle Remus' Magazine.

A Paradox in Age.

At an entertainment provided by the Woman's philanthropic society the most widely advertised attraction was a dancer, who, so it was whispered, "had become too old to teach in the public schools and had taken to dancing for a living." That remarkable announcement drew a crowd of curious persons who were anxious to see what a woman looked like who was too old to teach but young enough to practice the terpsichorean art in public. Also, everybody wanted to know what the topsyturvy age might be, but of course, no one found out.

Despondent Dog a Suicide.

A valuable bulldog belonging to John C. Reed, of Birmingham, N. Y., committed suicide by jumping up against a picket fence until he hooked his collar over one of the pickets. He then swung himself around until the weight of his body on the leather strap shut off his wind and he strangled. The dog had made a previous attempt to hang himself, but was found in time and taken from the fence, although he fought savagely while his owner unhooked his collar from the picket.

"Getting Even."

In savings banks it is customary to require a new depositor to sign an identification blank. In a certain savings bank recently a woman was somewhat unwilling to comply with this request. "What is your husband's name?" asked the clerk. "My husband's name is Peter Jones. What is your wife's name?" snapped the fair depositor.

A Job in Prospect.

New York was in sight. The ship was entering the harbor. "Ah, free America," exclaimed a foreigner on the deck. "Free America, ze land where everybody has an equal chance!" "Going to locate there?" inquired a friendly American. "Ah, yes, I haf come over to engage in ze oil business."

Making Reparation.

In some unaccountable manner little Frank had spilled a bottle of ink on his grandmother's carpet. "I'm awful sorry," he apologized, "but—thinking of his little savings bank—"I'll buy you another bottle, grandma."

Republican Campaign Funds.

The Houston (Texas) Post throws light on a bit of Republican buncombe in this way: "It is announced from Washington that the Republican Congressional Committee is preparing to set up a great campaign thunder factory at the Federal capital for the purpose of conducting a long, persistent campaign for the control of the next Congress, and some people are wondering where the money is to come from, since it is not probable that the 'yellow dog' funds will be available. Don't be alarmed about the ability of the Republicans to get money and plenty of it, and they will get it from the same old sources in the same old way. So far as this Washington bureau is concerned, however, it will be apparent later on that the public itself will pay the burden of the expenses. The approaching session of Congress will witness a vast output of oratory. These speeches will be printed by the tens of thousands at a nominal cost and mailed to all sections of the country under the congressional frank. Thousands of tons of documents, prepared for campaign purposes, will thus go to the voters.

The voter who gets this stuff, together with seeds, books, etc., may swell up when he thinks of the courtesy of the Congressman in thus remembering him, but it will not occur to him, perhaps, that he is paying for it himself. All the preaching we have heard about civic righteousness will count for little when the exigencies of the campaign require money. The Republican managers may not get it from Mr. Harriman or from the life insurance companies, but the protected barons are still interested in the Dingley law and they will have to pay the cost of its maintenance as usual. They know well that the Republican talk of tariff revision is buncombe and they will be prepared to do business with the campaign managers when money is needed. Of course, these contributions will not come directly from the treasuries of the trusts and corporations, but it is merely a matter of juggling the books to transfer the money to the hands of some individual who will land it over.

All the indications are that next year's contest will be fought between the people and the money power. The Democrats will have less money than ever before and the Republicans will have all they need for legitimate purposes and an abundance with which to buy voters in the doubtful State. The problem of getting the money is not troubling the Republican managers in the slightest."
